

PRESERVED COACHING STOCK OF BRITISH RAILWAYS

AMENDMENT SHEET NUMBER 89

March 2007

SPECIAL AND CHARTER TRAIN COACHING STOCK

Twelve years ago, in early 1995, when I started producing these 'Amendment Sheets', the intention was to keep tabs on the carriages included in 'Preserved Coaching Stock of British Railways – Part one' and also those in 'Preserved Coaching Stock of British Railways – Part Two' when that was published. This included the privately owned carriages authorised for use on the then 'Railtrack' network. Coverage soon expanded to cover the carriages acquired by, what to make things simple, is easiest described as 'Pete Waterman & Co.'.

As the privatisation process progressed through 1995 and into the late 1990's, the evolution of privateer 'charter' carriage fleets, although complicated, could be followed and understood. It is probably fair to say a zenith was reached by the privateers for the 1999 Solar Eclipse. This saw the vast majority of 'charter' carriages in use on the 11th August. Incidentally, the last time I personally travelled on a charter train.

The evolution continued in a similar manner to the late 1990's into the first years of the twenty-first century. From 2000 though, I have been considering the majority of the 'charter' carriage fleets that evolved under the 'Special and Charter Train Coaching Stock' heading, with those predominantly consisting of heritage carriages or those used regularly on their host heritage railway under the 'News of Mainline Operations' heading.

Since 2002, an increasing trend has been the leasing of carriages by the privateers considered under the 'Special and Charter Train Coaching Stock' heading. These leased carriages predominantly being those that were given very heavy overhauls and refurbishments around the turn of the century and that would have been expected to see regular timetabled use into the next decade, had they not been displaced prematurely by newly constructed multiple units.

Following a long period of consideration, I have taken the decision, that this is the last Amendment Sheet to include the 'Special and Charter Train Coaching Stock'. Although I still have a strong interest in what can be considered the core contents of the 'Preserved Coaching Stock of British Railways', that is the carriages that can recognisably be considered as preserved. My interest in carriage operations on the national railway network of today has declined considerably in recent years. I suppose, what the 11th August 1968 was to those interested in steam locomotives on the national railway network, the 20th July 2002 was to my interest in carriages on the national railway network. The complications of ownerships, company relations and status of certain vehicles being something I am no longer enthused to take the time investigating. Probably it is now best left to those with a passion for those things whom have not become as disillusioned with passenger operations on the national railway network as I have to take the mantle forward.

The information under the various privateers below should bring things up to date, at least as far as the very recently published Platform 5 'Locomotives & Coaching Stock 2007' anyway. In addition, as an appendix to this Amendment Sheet I have listed the various privateer fleets as I understand them currently to be and this too should correlate with 'Locomotives & Coaching Stock 2007'.
